

CHLOE THIRLWALL

Job: Head of People Success

Company: Distology

I manage everything people and talent-related across Distology's UK and European divisions. I look after the entire lifecycle of our employees, from recruiting and onboarding, to progression and eventually, in some cases, offboarding. It's essentially my job to ensure people enjoy their jobs and reach their full potential at Distology.

Passionate

Supportive

Positive

The skills I use most in my job...Team management

- Communication
- Creative thinking
- Flexibility
- Problem solving

The most interesting thing I've worked on in my career so far...My current role is by far the most interesting as I find it fascinating to be part of such a fast-paced and growing company, especially as the world of work has evolved particularly in the people/HR realm since the pandemic.

What inspired me into digital and tech...I've always been interested in tech, but I felt unequipped to enter the sector after university. After my career break, I read the Distology job advertisement and instantly knew it aligned with my values. It made me feel empowered to combine my HR skills and passion for tech together.

My educational background is...After completing my degree in business information technology, I worked for an advertising company in a HR and admin role – this is where I found my love for HR. I decided to go back to university to complete a post-graduate diploma in HR and the rest, as they say, is history!

What advice I'd give to girls thinking about a career in digital and tech...Take time to research the type of company you want to work for and don't be put off by the idea that you have to be technically minded to work in tech – you don't! There are various specialisms across the sector, so find what you're passionate about and pursue it.